Folks should remember California - a much bigger state - is voting now. Great time for a great debate.

> Dave Weigel ✓ @daveweigel
> If this Warren had shown up in New Hampshire, she'd be in a much stronger position now. In NH, the lack of early voting hurt her; in NV, lots of early votes have been locked in before this "oh, THAT'S why she's here" performance.

I love a lot of rural folks but it's near impossible to be informed without seeing the world. Unfortunately most of them don't get the chance to do that. Rural communities are simple places and Trumps simple ideas (that aren't well thought out) can really resonate there.

Situations from NH debate & NV debate could not be more different. In NH- an unprecedented 45% of voters said they might change their minds the weekend of the primary but here in NV, 3/4s of all ballots were cast before last night's debate. Little room for debate effects.

So there's no ambiguity, here's Bernie Sanders in May 2016 saying explicitly that even if he doesn't get a majority of pledged delegates, super-delegates should give him the nomination since he would be a better bet to beat Trump c-span.org/video/?408915- …

The hypocrisy here is mind-boggling. Read the transcript from this press conference with Sanders. Over and over and over he says that super-delegates should make him the Democratic nominee, even if Clinton has the most pledged delegates because he is more electable.

we are doomed to relive 2016 forever. Bernie referencing Denmark as an example of socialist success in a debate? Here's what the Prime Minister had to say last time: "Denmark is far from a socialist planned economy. Denmark is a market economy."

> Speaking at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, Danish PM Lars Lokke Rasmussen told students that he had "absolutely no wish to interfere the presidential debate in the US" but nonetheless attempted to set the record straight about his country.
> "I know that some people in the US associate the Nordic model with some sort of socialism. Therefore I would like to make one thing clear. Denmark is far from a socialist planned economy. Denmark is a market economy," Rasmussen said.
> "The Nordic model is an expanded welfare state which provides a high level of security for its citizens, but it is also a successful market economy with much freedom to pursue your dreams and live your life as you wish," he added.
> The PM's comments come after US presidential hopefuls Bernie Sanders and Hillary Clinton used part of the first Democratic debate to discuss how the United States could emulate Scandinavia.

Two points
1. I honestly don't understand why anyone says we shouldn't focus on electability -- seems pretty critical!
2. Given these numbers, a nominee who can do well in Florida, Arizona or North Carolina seems pretty damn important.

I'm not buying the numbers. First, Q poll. The Marquette Law poll a month ago had it much tighter. Second, Walker never did better than 53 percent. Third, that right track/wrong track number of 62% right-track has to be off. Dairies collapsing. Tariffs. FoxConn. Can't be right.

Trump was at 47% approval in latest NBC poll, significantly higher than his Election Day approval in 2016 or where he's been in most of the last 3 years. Not really sure why people are doubting the numbers. Obviously could be wrong, but I don't see why we assume they are.

Warren jabs Bernie on medical records:
"He had made a promise to release all his medical records and I thought that was what he was going to do."
Q: You feel like he hasn't done that?
"He just hasn't. I don't think that's a question of opinion. Those aren't medical records"

Warren doesn't call on Super Pac to stand down.
"If all the candidates want to get rid of super PACs, count me in. I'll lead the charge. But that's how it has to be. It can't be the case that a bunch of people keep them and only 1 or 2 don't."

The information about Russia preferring Trump was classified. The sources for this story requested anonymity because of the sensitive information. Stop being purposefully obtuse.

The story says the briefing of Sanders was a month ago. The briefing on Trump was in the last few weeks. These seem to be different briefings with different participants.

I don't accept that.
Sanders is running to be POTUS.
He has a duty to level with us all about that.
To let him off the hook is tantamount to saying that Trump, too, should be able to get away with not disclosing adverse info about himself & Russia because it too is classified!

This is a great idea. Every American needs to know what attacks against our elections may look like & what to be on guard against. No reason not to do a declassified briefing for the country. Remember, elections are largely run at the local, country level, not out of Washington.

> Joe Trippi @JoeTrippi
> Here's an idea. Why not hold House hearings on what every American should watch for and be on guard against in terms of how Russia or any other foreign actor tries to influence our election? Or maybe a network do a one hour special? No one knows what meddling means.

I loved this book discussion with Ta-Nehisi Coates. That the right envies the left's cultural power, and the left envies the right's political power, and so both sides feel like they're losing simultaneously, is crucial to understanding politics right now.

It's definitely the case that different candidates can appeal to different groups in a race against Trump; past third party voters is an example of a another moveable group. But can't assume the 2018 coalition will just reassemble itself.

A big chunk of this differential is time-bound: white, college edu women are expressing that Buttigieg is their preferred nominee & will be mad if he loses. But most, if not all, are likely to come around to nominee. But its that they have strong preference for mainstreamers.

When @JoeBiden touts the Obama Administration's efforts against the Ebola outbreak, the unsung hero is @RonaldKlain.

Ron served as the White House Ebola Response Coordinator in 2014-2015. You don't know his name because he succeeded

NEW: the office of @BarackObama is condemning pro-Trump PAC's ad using the former president's voice to undercut @JoeBiden, calling on TV stations to stop running the "disinformation." Cease and desist letter coming from Obama attorney.

Statement from @KatieMHill — twitter.com/mikememoli/sta …

> "President Obama has several friends in this race, including, of course, his own esteemed Vice President. He has said he has no plans to endorse in the primary because he believes that in order for Democrats to be successful this fall, voters must choose their nominee. But this despicable ad is straight out of the Republican disinformation playbook, and it's clearly designed to suppress turnout among minority voters in South Carolina by taking President Obama's voice out of context and twisting his words to mislead viewers. In the interest of truth in advertising, we are calling on TV stations to take this ad down and stop playing into the hands of bad actors who seek to sow division and confusion among the electorate."

The answer showcased Biden's ability to connect with voters emotionally.

"I kind of know what it's like to lose family. And my heart goes out to you," Biden said with tears in his eyes.

He added: "I've only been able to deal with it by realizing they're part of my being."

> Dan Merica @merica
> Joe Biden emotionally reflected on the loss of his son Beau on Wednesday, connecting the death of his oldest son to brain cancer to the loss that Anthony Thompson experienced when his wife was killed in the 2015 Charleston church shooting.

I could literally watch this a thousand times. The only correction is that Sanders called for superdelegates to overturn the nomination of the person with a majority of the PLEDGED delegate in 2016, not just the person with the most delegates.

One fun fact to consider as we edge towards a pandemic is the Trump administration asked the courts to take health care away from 20 million people.

Another is that, if Trump wins in 2020, he will likely have enough votes in Congress to take health coverage away from 30 million.

Where did this idea that in 2016 Sanders only wanted superdelegates in states he won to flip to his side?

When he made his big push for SDs in May 2016, he very clearly calling on any and all SDs to flip to give him the nomination in defiance of people's votes.

Here's a June 2016 interview, when it became clear that he wasn't going to win the majority of pledged delegates (and simply flipping SDs in states he won wouldn't be enough to get him the nomination).

POLITICS Bloomberg's Billions: How the Candidate Built an Empire of Influence

That chilling effect was apparent in 2015 to researchers at the Center for American Progress, a liberal policy group, when they turned in a report on anti-Muslim bias in the United States. Their draft included a chapter of more than 4,000 words about New York City police surveillance of Muslim communities; Mr. Bloomberg was mentioned by name eight times in the chapter, which was reviewed by The Times.

Biden went from merely being +4 points in SC over Sanders in the SC polling average after New Hampshire to winning by (probably) 20+ tonight. We can debate the implications of that and why it happened, but that's a pretty serious surge and not to be taken lightly.

My experience with Democratic primaries is that when Democrats see a runaway train, they often call a halt to ensure there's more vetting. Doesn't mean the train won't get to the station, but it does get slowed.

I wouldn't say that Sanders is doing terribly poorly in South Carolina. I think he's doing about as you'd guess, based on the demographics. It's Biden who is doing really well and in ways that go beyond obvious demographics--like still getting 40% in areas with few black voters

Biden's argument bolstered by the fact he not only dominated but did so w/ a turnout that was easily the most impressive of any early state.

> Nate Cohn @Nate_Cohn
> We're near the 500,000 voter mark in South Carolina, which easily makes this the largest increase in turnout of any early state, at least in raw numbers.
> Should caution that this is an open contest, and that the absence of a competitive GOP race may boost Dem votes here most Holy cow! Over 60,000 people voted in Charleston County! This breaks the previous record in 2008 by over 15,000!

This is really important for Joe Cunningham and Jaime Harrison. This kind of trend will sooner than later make SC a purple state.

The moderate wing of the Democratic Party is consolidating- but make no mistake the @BernieSanders campaign knew it was coming. This is how Sanders responsed to @elizacollins1 question on the topic:

.@BernieSanders supporters have started booing reporters at rallies. One yelled at us in the pen as he exited in LA yday. Not at the same level but starting to feel Trumpian. And Sanders and some top surrogates have been going after "the corporate media" with increasing disdain.

Cameron since you're reporting at an event where 15,000 people attended can you tell us what this one person yelled? I walked around with a press badge and had no problem. Can you ask the other 300 people there as press if they felt it was Trumpian?

New Yorkers receiving Medicaid coverage will not have to pay a co-pay for any testing related to #coronavirus.

Currently all COVID-19 tests being conducted at the State's Wadsworth Lab are fully covered.

Maybe campaigning in Klobuchar's state on the eve of Super Tuesday wasn't such a great idea if you wanted to keep her from supporting Biden.

Here is the full statement: "Americans must also remain aware that foreign actors continue to try to influence public sentiment and shape voter perceptions..."
fbi.gov/news/pressrel/ ...
twitter.com/PhilipRucker/s ...

Joint Statement from DOS, DOJ, DOD, DHS, ODNI, FBI, NSA, and CISA on Preparations for Super Tuesday

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, U.S. Attorney General William Barr, Secretary of Defense Mark Esper, Acting Secretary of Homeland Security Chad Wolf, Acting Director of National Intelligence Richard Grenell, Federal Bureau of Investigation Director Christopher Wray, U.S. Cyber Command Commander and National Security Agency Director Gen. Paul Nakasone, and Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency Director Christopher Krebs today released the following joint statement:

Tomorrow, millions of voters in more than a dozen states and territories will cast their votes in presidential primaries. 'Super Tuesday' will see more Americans head to the polls than any other day of the primary season. We continue to work with all 50 states, U.S. territories, local officials, political parties, and private sector partners to keep elections free from foreign interference.

Americans must also remain aware that foreign actors continue to try to influence public sentiment and shape voter perceptions. They spread false information and propaganda about political processes and candidates on social media in hopes to cause confusion and create doubt in our system. We remain alert and ready to respond to any efforts to disrupt the 2020 elections. We continue to make it clear to foreign actors that any effort to undermine our democratic processes will be met with sharp consequences.

The level of coordination and communication between the federal government and state, local, and private sector partners is stronger than it's ever been. Our departments and agencies are working together in an unprecedented level of commitment and effort to protect our elections and to counter malign foreign influence, but voters have a role to play too.

We encourage all voters going to the polls to check your voter registration and know ahead of time when to vote, where to vote, what's on your ballot, and whether your state requires identification. Your state or local election official's office is the most trusted source for election material. A well-informed and vigilant republic is the best defense against disinformation.

Quick note from Bernie's presser earlier today in Utah. At one point, when a Washington Post reporter raised his hand, Sanders looked at him, pointed, and said, "No." A terse & striking moment after the recent incident where he criticized the timing of a Post story (see below).

> Sen. Bernie Sanders (I., Vt.) on Friday said the Washington Post report about Russian attempts to boost his 2020 presidential campaign was released to harm his campaign ahead of the Nevada caucuses.
> "How do you think it came out now if you had the briefing a month ago?" a reporter asked Sanders as he was walking up to a jet in Bakersfield, Calif.
> "I'll let you guess about one day before the Nevada caucus," Sanders said. "Why do you think it came out? It was the Washington Post? Good friends."

Based on most indicators, Biden is the most popular candidate among working-class Democratic voters.

Candidate support by education
Though the Democratic Party is often associated with educated elites, nearly two-thirds of all Democratic voters do not hold a college degree. By contrast, 37% of the party is made up of college-educated professionals, an influential but still substantial minority. The former group has historically tended towards more moderate candidates, but the latter still wields substantial power via political donations.

The turnout in the 2008 Democratic primary turnout in Virginia was 986k. Turnout in 2020 is about 1.3m.

And Biden has received about 75k more votes than Obama did in 2008 (and well more than the 795 votes Biden got in 2008, since he was still on the ballot)

How do people think storming the stage on a primary election when all the candidates are in the SAME party is going to make ANYONE want to vote for your candidate? it reminds me of what happened to @KamalaHarris and how @K_JeanPierre saved the day. This is NOT activism

I think politics is about building coalitions, reaching out to people who don't agree with you on everything, and getting them to support your cause.

That's also the definition of leadership and the candidate who masters those skills should be the nominee.

When these are for federal elections...there should be major consequences for this tactics. The fact that voter suppression is allowed to occur is a stain on our country, and the philosophy behind our democratic republic.

Dunno about that. I'd reckon there's a decent amount of Bernie supporters who will sit out the general election if they feel they were cheated (reality or not, it's an easy narrative to sell)

It is important to fight for the issues, advance your argument, and grow the cause.

To do so, the questions that organizers or anyone seeking to advance a cause or campaign should always ask themselves are: who else can we include, and how can we listen and include them?

Agreed. I'm curious though why it is that Senator Sanders has utterly done everything possible to alienate potential moderates that could have come on board. Why is it a my way or the high way attitude?

What has Sanders done to demonstrate adaptability?

Looks like Dem primary turnout yesterday exceeded 2016 in most places and set records in MA, NH, SC, VT & VA. But overall a bit below record year of 2008. Another great @kkondik + @LarrySabato analysis:

centerforpolitics.org/crystalball/ar …

Table 1: Recent Democratic primary turnout

State	2008	2016	2020
Alabama	536,635	396,851	451,421
Arkansas*	314,234	221,020	228,351
Massachusetts*	1,258,923	1,215,970	1,260,027
New Hampshire	287,556	253,018	299,826
North Carolina*	1,580,726	1,142,916	1,303,909
Oklahoma	417,207	335,843	303,977
South Carolina	532,151	368,577	537,869
Tennessee	624,764	372,222	513,438
Texas	2,874,986	1,435,895	2,215,601
Vermont*	154,960	134,838	157,058
Virginia	986,203	785,041	1,324,425

Notes:  indicates states with incomplete vote counts. We excluded states that have held caucuses in one or more of these years, and also California, where the vote count is substantially incomplete. Year in bold is highest turnout of the three elections. Data is as of 4 p.m. Wednesday afternoon.*

The establishment rigged this for Biden by starting with two heavily white states, bowing to Team Sanders on allowing caucuses, not giving Biden enough $ to run ads, & having not 1 but 2 billionaires spend a gazillion dollars to siphon votes from him.

The point is that even given the most spectacularly and improbably positive night for Biden on Super Tuesday - where everything goes unimaginably great for him - he's still going to be well behind Sanders. Yet DNC is making clear that won't be enough for Bernie to win.

4 3 481

delegates isn't 'well behind' though. Biden's victory in SC was a 25-30 delegate spread. So that would be two good results from flipping the delegate leader, especially somewhere like FL

Glenn Greenwald @ggreenwald · Mar 1

Again, 60 delegates behind is like the Never, Never Land scenario for Biden - giving him every last possible benefit of the doubt about everything possible good thing happening for him on Tuesday.

The probable outcome for him, according to them, is far grimmer.

It's only fair to note that large-scale testing hasn't been possible until now -- and may still not be possible -- because the Trump administration also failed to establish the necessary infrastructure.

The suburban tsunami that elected the House Democrats in 2018 came out on Tuesday for Biden and against Trump. I've told you for years that it includes liberals and even moderate GOP and many ignored that. But both voted for Biden on Tuesday.

Attention Michigan Voters!

If you've already returned your absentee ballot in the upcoming primary election scheduled for March 10: you CAN request that your original ballot be "spoiled" or thrown out and submit a new ballot with your local clerk.

Details here: ⤵️⤵️⤵️

If a voter has already voted absentee and wishes to change their vote (because the candidate has dropped out of the race, or for any other reason), a voter can spoil their ballot by submitting a written request to their city or township clerk.

The voter must sign the request and state if they would like a new absentee ballot mailed to them or if they will vote at the polls.

This request must be received by 2 p.m. the Saturday before the election if received by mail. An absentee ballot may be spoiled in person at the clerk's office until 4 p.m. the Monday prior to the election.

The voter can obtain a new absentee ballot there or vote at the polls. There is no option on Election Day to spoil an absentee ballot that has been received by the clerk.

Margaret Sullivan had a good column on this problem. She noted an expert who advises: "Lead with the truth, air the falsehood, and then follow with the fact check." wapo.st/2VLJ7O1

> Some months ago, I wrote about the linguist George Lakoff's prescription for handling the president's false statements and lies, an approach that's become known as the "truth sandwich."
> Rather than lead with the falsehood and then try to debunk it, Lakoff — an expert on how propaganda works — suggested flipping that formula: Lead with the truth, air the falsehood, and then follow with the fact check.

Michigan is the biggest delegate prize in the next wave of primaries. For those who have voted absentee, you are able to "spoil" your ballot if you've voted for a candidate who has since suspended his or her campaign and request a new ballot. Details below from Sec. of State:

Spoiling an Absent Voter Ballot

If a voter has already voted absentee and wishes to change their vote (because the candidate has dropped out of the race, or for any other reason), a voter can spoil their ballot by submitting a written request to their city or township clerk. The voter must sign the request and state if they would like a new absentee ballot mailed to them or if they will vote at the polls. This request must be received by 2 p.m. the Saturday before the election if received by mail. An absentee ballot may be spoiled in person at the clerk's office until 4 p.m. the Monday prior to the election. The voter can obtain a new absentee ballot there or vote at the polls. There is no option on Election Day to spoil an absentee ballot that has been received by the clerk.

Oh forget about Democrats - a majority of the country has concerns about a candidate who has recently had a heart attack

> But the results aren't all rosy for Sanders. The poll also asked an overall sample of registered voters about their thoughts on candidates' qualities in a general election.
> That section of the poll shows that a total of 57% of registered voters either "had some reservations" (42%) or were "very uncomfortable" (15%) about a candidate who had a heart attack in the last year.
> It also shows that 53% of voters "had some reservations" (39%) or were "very uncomfortable" (14%) about a candidate over the age of 75. Sanders, 78, shares that distinction in the Democratic field with 78-year-old former

Important Update: Coronavirus

As emailed to Policy Conference attendees, participants, speakers, administration and Hill offices.

cdc.gov/coronavirus/20 …

We have confirmed that at least two Policy Conference attendees from New York have tested positive for the Coronavirus.

We have continued to remain in constant communication with the Westchester County Health Department and the DC Health Department which is coordinating with New York Health Department, and national health authorities. We have consulted with a top infectious disease specialist, Dr. Edward Septimus - Adjunct Professor Internal Medicine at Texas A&M College of Medicine.

The guidance of these health professionals continues to be that all conference participants should follow CDC guidelines and consult their health care providers if they feel ill or have medical questions.

If you test positive for Coronavirus, we urge you to inform your local health authorities so they can properly coordinate their response to this situation with the appropriate health authorities.

The normalization of Trump. They report on him as if he were any other president, albeit with some unique characteristics and mannerisms.

The media should be telling us EVERY DAY that NONE OF THIS IS NORMAL!!!

Forget Dem insiders, lots of rank and file Dems have expressed concern about Senator Sanders health, given his heart attack a few months ago, and asked for his medical records he promised. But oddly, reporter @ryangrim has never worried about that. Or asked for transparency there @drsanjaygupta said Sanders released all the necessary medical information. I'm not a doctor, so that satisfies me. If he says he wants more, I will happily concur with the good doctor. What does this have to do with Biden?

Neera Tanden ✓ @neeratanden · 2h

Great for @drsanjaygupta to clarify because in this piece he points to a test that Sanders hasn't released that would tell us a lot. You may want to ask the campaign about it. And I'm just sharing the actual health concerns of Dem voters

JFC Neera, Sanders heart doesn't impact his cognitive decision making capacity and if he dies from a heart attack there's a VP. Biden clearly has cog decline compared to last year even and that won't kill him anytime soon. So we'd just have a Pres with dementia making decisions

And the arguing of the obverse, about a candidate having had two stents to address a blocked artery, doesn't make any sense. Being president requires significant mental acuity. But making a sly argument about disability makes me wonder about whether people would disqualify FDR.

1. That is false. See the video. He specifically focused on the test, which you've said nothing about and never bothered to ask the campaign about, despite your health concern
2 what if something happens to Sanders if he's the nominee before the election?? Can you answer?

‘An embarrassing fiasco of national proportions’

With Test Kits in Short Supply, Health Officials Sound Alarms

This article is by Katie Thomas, Sarah Kliff and Nicholas Bogel-Burroughs.

President Trump claimed again on Friday that anyone who needed a coronavirus test “gets a test.” But from Washington State to Florida to New York, doctors and patients are clamoring for tests that they say are in woefully short supply, and their frustration is mounting alongside the growing number of cases around the country.

In California, where thousands are being monitored for the virus, only 516 tests had been conducted by the state as of Thursday. Washington health officials have more matter has impeded our ability to beat back this epidemic,” the official said in a letter Friday.

More than 300 cases have been confirmed, at least 17 have died, and thousands are in self-quarantine. Public health officials are warning that no one knows how deeply the virus will spread, in part because the federal government's flawed rollout of tests three weeks ago has snowballed into an embarrassing fiasco of national proportions.

The latest two deaths were an-

The end of a campaign is gut wrenching. It's particularly painful because it is a labor of love. But how you end a campaign says a lot about you. Shitting on former rivals is not the most noble ending, it is the least. Your candidate deserves better.

This Democratic primary is not a fight about policy at this point. It's about unity versus division. The only Bernie move is to show he can stop attacking and unite with...anyone.

> Nate Silver @NateSilver538
> Seems like Bernie's best argument right now—certainly the one his campaign is pushing most consistently—is on Biden's past stances on potential cuts to Social Security. But Sanders is so weak among older voters that I'm not sure it moves the needle as much as it might otherwise.

They're trying to change history—don't let them. In the chaotic atmosphere of 2020, the Wayback Machine is a crucial resource in the fight against disinformation, and now more than ever we need your help. Right now we're preserving history as it unfolds, keeping track of who's saying what and when—all without charging for access, selling user data, or running ads. Instead, we rely on the generosity of individuals to help us keep the record straight.

Right now, the Internet Archive (which runs this project) has a 2-to-1 Matching Gift Campaign, tripling the impact of every donation. If you find our public record useful, please chip in.

A lot of pundits misunderstand the concern about vitriol of a candidate's supporters. I think a lot of Dem voters who are interested in uniting to fight Trump-a clear majority-see those supporters as poor allies in the fight. And thereby think other candidates are better at unity

Dr. Stein, didn't you do enough damage last election, helping (aided by Russian media outlets) to deny a historic opportunity for Americans to elect the first woman ever as the U.S. president? Given the damage you did to Clinton in 2016, "Dems" should not listen to you in 2020.

If Klobuchar was still in the race, I am not sure Biden wins Minnesota. Bernie had a good shot at Massachusetts. The moderate consolidation worked, surely that much is true?

Neera Tanden @neeratanden · 1h
Yes, it worked, but maybe, and just hear me out on this... they exited the race not because someone told them to, but because they had no path to victory, and they endorsed Biden because they thought he'd be a better nominee than Sanders, who they have hearty disagreements with.

Let me say this about a Kamala Harris endorsement. I hate that this has to be her. I think she would be the frontrunner had Biden not jumped in. And we saw what Cali just did. This endorsement puts her seat in danger in 2022. I hope people send her money from now to help her.

Agreed, Bernie got only about 33% in CA, and there isn't really a legit challenger to the left of Kamala who could seriously challenge her in 2022. Also, I think we overestimate the extent to which people will remember who endorsed whom in a presidential primary.

Enough with the conspiracies. No one forced them out of the race. They left and joined Biden. Any reporter can fact check this by asking Klobuchar or Buttigieg.

This seems more likely to be the result of turnout than voters changing their minds, i.e. center-left voters are turning out more than in 2016 while turnout on the left is flat. Still, seems clear that several D campaigns overestimated how liberal the electorate was.

> Matt Grossmann @MattGrossmann
> Across Super Tuesday states, exit polls of the Democratic primary electorate averaged 7 % points more moderate/conservative voters & 3 % points fewer "very liberal" voters compared to 2016; surprising because liberal identification rose nationally among Democrats in 2017 & 2018

I will never understand the "Bernie would've won" argument (re 2016).

HRC lost because she couldn't get 80k or so more votes in Pennsylvania, Michigan and Wisconsin. Swing states. So her loss wasn't due to being too moderate; if anything, she was too liberal.

The answer to hatred & division is to reignite our spirit of common purpose.

@JoeBiden won't only win - he'll show there's more that unites us than divides us.

He'll restore honor to the Oval Office and tackle our most pressing challenges.

That's why I'm proud to endorse Joe.

Culture is stronger than strategy. And an organization's culture starts with the leader.

The Bernie Campaign, like the Trump Campaign, is defined largely by Ego, resentments, paranoia and ideological rigidity. With a strong dash of misogyny.

It's my privilege to call @neeratanden a friend. She's a good person, actually a progressive (she's to my left) and smart about politics and policy. The bizarre hatred of her from the "Left" explains why Bernie Sanders is a failure.

I personally think if the Left can't persuade Neera then they aren't going to persuade America. She actually is for most of what you are for but instead of persuading her you attack her. It's insanity as politics and explains completely why Bernie is a failure. Warren would.

Bernie's gun policies are probably identical to Joe's. The difference is that Joe announced he was putting Beto in charge of gun policy. Beto announced, on the debate stage, that he is in favor of mandatory gun buy backs. 2A folks call that gun confiscation.

Look if Sanders is not the candidate, he isn't the candidate. Fine. But if it has to be a 'centrist' why this centrist? Why Biden? Why not literally anyone else (except Bloomberg!): Buttigieg, Harris, Booker etc? I just don't get it. There were so many better centrist options.

Soledad, his whole argument during the campaign has been Medicare for All will take away people's insurance. If he sees a Medicare for All bill, what do you think he will do to it?

Helena Hamilton @TweetlySaved · 20m
Right. No, he didn't say he'd "kill it with his bare hands" but it's clear from what he did say that he'd veto it. I don't know how you listen to what he said and reach any other conclusion.

Biden's own plan, on his on website, acknowledges that they will leave 10 million Americans uninsured. Biden has made it clear his entire political career that he opposes Medicare for All. Biden is flatly lying that transition to M4A would entail depriving anyone of coverage.

1. No bailouts for industries.
2. Targeted help for hospitals and the health care sector.
3. General relief directly to workers and families. The owners of capital have had a good decade and can weather a downturn; it's labor that deserves a strengthened safety net.

My wife, a doctor, said some patients are refusing to see Asian American doctors due to #coronavirus. People, curb your fear & racism. It won't help you or the country. Plus, you will be behaving like an ignorant a-hole. The virus, unlike us, doesn't discriminate.

I once fired a patient who suddenly did not want to see our Indian doctor and told her to go back to her country, she is an American citizen. Zero tolerance for that People like yourselves need to watch what you say & how you say it. Paid pundits add to the situation. You only make it harder to unite. tRump says things for political reasons. We know that.

At moments like this one is starkly reminded that the top levels of the Trump administration are filled with people who would not hold these jobs in any other administration, because they are not good at these jobs.

For example, the job of the president's economic advisers was to come up with a fiscal stimulus plan.

Unfortunately, however, they're not capable of producing actual plans. At best, they'll do what they did with the 2017 tax cut and get Congress to do all of the real work.

The part I find amazing is that investors find this comforting.

Although I guess there's a decent chance they'll still manage to produce something that will be beneficial for rich people.

The generational difference between Bernie and Biden voters in the Missouri exit poll data is just crazy. cnn.com/election/2020/...

Age

	18-44	45 and older
Biden	26%	71%
Bloomberg	1%	1%

As I've said, the big challenge for Sanders has been that Dems want to unite to fight Trump but as he's behind, his only option is to attack Biden, which makes Dem voters want to end this faster. It's a bind that it's hard to see how he gets out of.

The democratic party just lost a whole generation of 20 and 30 year-olds. These voters will remember the party that was too scared to offer a vision for a better future, instead of settling on trying to reinstate something that never was. Biden is an avatar of liberal fear.

Biden gets a pathetic amount of support from young voters: what does that say about the future of a party that doesn't seem that interested in representing our needs or doing much of anything about the climate crisis that we will have to live with?

SoSayU @sosayu3 · 49m
It says you need to all get out and represent yourselves. If you don't vote, don't expect others to anticipate your needs. And understand that most older voters ARE voting for candidates we believe will benefit all of us. We are just less passionate/more pragmatic about it.

At this point, it's difficult to see how Sanders would go on the attack vs. Biden in a debate five days from now without inflicting as much/more damage to himself.

I live in a very RED precinct. It contains one very small subdivision. No wait to vote at all.

Three miles away is a very BLUE area. Huge lines wrap around that building on election days. Hour-long (or longer) waits.

Wrong again. 40 percent of Mississippians voted Democratic in 2016; 0.3 percent voted Green. Democrats (and esp black Democrats) should be a major force in MS and throughout the South. They are silenced only by Electoral College winner-take-all laws. twitter.com/JuliaCarmel__/…

In 2018, young voters did not turn out in the Dem primaries at high levels. But they did in the general, and voted at high levels for moderate candidates like Evers, Whitmer and House Dems in the swing districts in the general. Perhaps they just have less primary fervor

There is truth to this. Young people vote infrequently, and when they do, it's in a presidential election. They don't vote in other elections, especially primaries. The only youngs that showed up were the energized ones-by Bernie. When the general rolls around, more will be there

Just a reminder: in 2018, millennial turnout in the Dem primaries was abysmal. But it very high in the general; even for more moderate candidates - Whitmer did fantastically well with them. But it's really possible they were really motivated to vote against Trump and the GOP.

It's time to unify. But what's odd about this tweet is that I wasn't running CAP when Sirota worked there. So I don't even know what he's talking about. Pretty disingenuous.

But even though he's tweeted at me a LOT, I hope at some point we can be on the same side to fight Trump

I was there in mid 2005. I was VP for Academic Affairs. I had little to no interaction with Sirota.

I hope this is the last time we ever hear from Michael Moore & Susan Sarandon in American Politics ever again!! They are complicit in giving us Bush in 2000 & Trump in 2016!! They have done great damage to this country for 20 years! Enough is Enough!!

And while we are on the subject, Washington also shocks me. I thought that WA would go for Bernie. Shows what I know about WA I guess.

It's not about a poll. It's about turnout. I have no doubt that a generic Dem candidate beats Trump in the youth vote, I don't know if they'll actually show up to vote.

Yes, but Evers ended up winning by a tiny margin. It's possible the presidential race in Wisconsin will be just as close. Dems need Arizona as a backup.
